The 10th International Mammalogical
Congress

The international mammalogical meetings bring together mammalogists from all regions of the world. Previously, this international event has taken place in Japan, South Africa, Mexico, Australia, Canada, Finland, Checkoslovakia, and USSR.

This is the first time that the IMC will take place in South America, specifically in Argentina. It is our deep and sincere wish to bring together the broadest diversity of studies and investigators in the field of mammalian zoology. We aspire to provide an ideal forum for the stimulating exchange of ideas and promotion of integrative and collaborative research among the members of our broad scientific community. In addition, this will be an extraordinary opportunity to promote and consolidate the growing number of South American mammal societies.

Mendoza is located in the Andean foothills and has a wide variety of ecological areas. There are diverse and marvelous local activities and trips. The city of Mendoza is well connected, both by air as well as bus.
